7 POSE OF THE DAY

HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE ORIENTATION

The evening commenced at La Martiniere Girls' College, where the Secretary General, Shubhi Singh along with our Deputy Secretary General, Devyanshi Agarwal introduced the delegates to the ways and procedures of MUNs and how they work. Its purpose was to clarify any doubts or queries the delegates had with their respective Chairs.

The delegates present in the auditorium were given detailed explanations of the MUN proceedings from how to go about the Roll Calls and the Moderated/ Unmoderated Caucuses to the GSL, SSL, Points and Resolutions! The delegates listened intently to what was being instructed, faces covered with the kind of concentration one country needs to win wars and pass resolutions.

The delegates who had attended enough MUNs had the rules and procedures on their fingertips! They were the ones sitting at the back and enjoying a good banter with fellow delegates. Camera flashes could be seen going off every so often from various corners of the auditorium, as the delegates under the spotlight straightened their backs and looked ahead for the perfect 'candid'. Shortly after the instructions were read out, the delegates were introduced to their respective Chairs.

The Chairs offered to help with any doubts and pass on their wisdom to the delegates before the committees began. Hardly any of the Delegates raised any queries which could have two possible reasons. One, that the delegates had no idea what was happening on the podium and were busy lurking and stalking their co-delegates on various social media platforms or two, the real life form of the proverb "Still water runs deep". These delegates did not want their competition to know how well prepared they came, thus, fooling them by playing dumb.

Soon after, the hubbub began and the Delegates started getting impatient. Snack packages were distributed by the Logistic members to every member present in the room. While the OC cast the 'Food Magic', the delegates went ahead with their own Magic of Lobbying. Maybe it was the words of encouragement from the EB Members or the experience of meeting new people and building diplomatic relations with them, which filled the room with the kind of energy that would leave you craving for more. Within the next 15 minutes, groups were formed, strategies were being discussed and strong foundations were being built. Delegates were being seen clarifying doubts and pestering their respective EB members with questions who seemed to be very keen on helping. Apart from the formal interactions going on, the giggles, whispers and exchange of glances didn't go unnoticed.

In the end, everyone could be seen leaving the room with a smile, as the delegates prepared themselves for an extremely energetic, loud and productive day which was to follow. Be it the experienced MUNers or the first timers, all seemed to be united in the cause to win and we wish them all the best.

THE OPENING CEREMONY

LMGMUN'17 FLAGS OFF

Project Director: ICSSR Project, on the "Position and Participation of Women in the Uprising of 1857 carried out at the Giri Institute of Development Studies, Lucknow. A multitalented lady, she has over 40 publications including 6 books and several book reviews, papers and journal articles to her credit. We were truly honoured to have an individual like her serve as an inspiration to young minds.

The Secretary General, Shubhi Singh, introduced the seven committees to the delegates along with their agendas. This was followed by a formal introduction of the EB members of each committee. The feeling was finally settling in, LMGMUN had 'actually' just begun. The delegates showed their eagerness and excitement with a huge round of applause for the EB Members, hoping to catch them later for a quick tip right before the committee sessions begin.

Shubhi Singh called upon stage Ms. Renu Mishra, our Guest of Honour, the Executive Director of Association for Advocacy and Legal Initiatives. She is a lawyer and Human Rights activist who has been active in the field of women's empowerment for about two decades. The focus of her work has been the access to justice for women and children.

Having dedicated her life towards effecting structural change for the promotion and protection of women's rights, she acts as a technical member and consultant to several national networks as well as State Departments. We were truly privileged to have Ma'am as a guest.

Our Secretary

General addressed the delegates present, welcoming them to the three days which were to follow, filled with fruitful debates and an experience worth remembering forever. She spoke about the importance of Human Rights and the competition of resources that we have to face today as young adults. 'And how do we make this happen?', you wonder? Who will make this change? Well, Shubhi had it all covered. "Who? When? Where?" she continued, "You. Here. Now."

Thus, with the bang of her gavel, the Third Edition of LMGMUN was declared open! This was followed by a huge round of applause with little bits of cheering here and there. The delegates were all ready to scramble and put into use their lobbying skills, but it had to be put to a pause for the National Anthem followed by our School Song. The buzzing was unstoppable; the fire ragging hearts and the fierceness in the delegates' eyes couldn't be contained and the auditorium gates were opened, welcoming the morning sun rays. With the sunshine, the delegates hoped to radiate their committee with equal confidence and brightness, or maybe even more!

UNITED NATIONS SECURITY COUNCIL

THE SYRIAN CONSPIRACY... ...because everyone loves conspiracy theorists!

With the United Nations Security Council already having an open agenda, the confusion and chaos among the delegates was evident in the orientation ceremony itself. The delegate of Syria was going under the pseudonym of the delegate of Angola just for the sake of convincing other delegates to discuss the Syrian Conflict. With hearts already pumped up for the conference and the delegates being enthusiastic, the delegate of Syria received a befitting reply from the delegate of Azerbaijan saying that he seems to be knowing the delegate of Syria as he is predisposed and inclined towards discussing the Syrian Conflict.

Nevertheless, this ruse of the delegate of Syria was revealed during the orientation ceremony by the delegate himself. Even in the opening ceremony, the delegates of UNSC HAD to "lend their ears" to the eager and way too hard working delegate of Syria. The exchange of disparaging words in this "not too friendly" discussion was akin to flying saucers being thrown about. The first committee session began with the delegates getting quite animated and enthusiastic about putting forward their point and justifying them. Agendas like the South China Sea, Syrian Conflict, Israel Palestine Conflict, Nagorno Karabakh Conflict and the EU Refugee Crisis came up, with the delegate of Syria impressively putting forth justifications for discussing the Syrian Conflict. With confusion still persistent in the Council, the Executive Board first discussed the Rules of Procedure and then asked the delegates to bring down the number of agendas to two.

THE WHAM! OF UNCLE SAM

Disclaimer- This is an entirely fictional story. Any resemblance to a Superhero is purely coincidental. No animals (or humans for that matter) were harmed during the composition.

"Politics is the art of looking for trouble, finding it everywhere, diagnosing it incorrectly and applying the wrong remedies."

-Groucho Marx

We are already aware of the political (though in recent times, very non political) and economic power the United States of America yields over the world. Mr. Donald Trump is famous (albeit notoriously) for being a multi tasker of sorts, with running a multinational company and then running the oldest democracy in the world.

The delegate of The United States Of America also seems to have acquired some of Mr. Trump's (not so highly acknowledged and not so super) superpowers. With one vicious look from his eyes, he seems to have intimidated a large number of delegates. It is as if some invisible laser ray is being emitted from his eyes. It seems that he is a true and ardent supporter of the head of his country. He has openly accused Azerbaijan of committing massacres against the Armenians, blatantly ignoring the fact that the United States had itself supported Azerbaijan during the violation of the ceasefire in 2016. With the committee already becoming a drudge, it seems that the usual "we are not involved" policy of USA will be the one interesting thing to look forward to. Well, the IP does hope that Day two of the conference will bring forth delegates, who today were as dull as cloudy skies but will be as active as Quicksilver on Day Two as blame games and heated discussions are fodder for the IP.

THE MEDELLIN CARTEL

DESI CARTEL - when drug dealers turn thakurs!

The best part of being of a semi- crisis and unconventional committee is that one never knows when or in what shape the crisis may occur. For the committee at LMGUN, apparently, the crisis began during a bus ride. Pablo Escobar (the driver of the bus) seemed rather intent on getting everyone deported to the USA (Kanpur Road), instead of chilling out in 'a jail in Colombia'; according to Gustavo de Jesus Gaviria, it is better than 'a bed in the US'. Clearly, he's never seen the movie 'The Shawshank Redemption'.

Well, Robert Vesco stepped forth in time, and soon enough, a not- so- secret conference was being held in the dregs of Colombia (a small shack hidden away from the rest of the hotel). Considering the Colombian origin of the Cartel members, a very peculiar form of Spanish was being spoken. The word 'Medellin' itself, was the most frequently mispronounced, and still remains a major debatable issue (Point Of Information from the IP- It is pronounced Me-dey-LEEN, ladies and gentlemen, check with Google).

The most active(ly dramatic) member of the committee was Roberto Suarez Gomez. Greeting the committee effusively and boisterously in Spanish learnt undoubtedly from the Patel Institute of Learning A-GRADE Spanish, Gomez was the epitome of force and power. Armed with his papers, he stomped about the room, exposing the secrets of the nation. A perfect pro-violence, drug- trading, Arnab Goswami, if you will. (Wait, Arnab Goswami IS all that already) The only difference was the apparent dislike which Roberto Suarez Gomez harboured towards his chair.

After a while, the committee seemed to become an enactment of Kabhi Khushi Kabhi Gham, only Laddoo(Luis Fernando Duque) was a really vociferous debater. Since the Executive Board members thought that drama was a nice way to encourage debate, there was a full- house Indian family tragedy in the conference room. Amitabh Bachchan (Don Pablo) ruled with an iron fist, cracking dangerously true jokes, and open to disowning his son if he dared speak over another mafia lord. Jaya Bachchan (Pablo's wife, Maria Henao) conspired behind Pablo's back on giving back his sons the freedom to speak about anything they want. Laddoo stomped about the room, angry at the limited capacity of human hearing without bursting blood vessels. Several blood vessels ruptured as he spoke.

VIRGINIA, MRS. ESC. AURDHOKHA

When friends turn into foes...or women

The plot thickens by the hour. Pablo Escobar, in addition to his wife, seems to be entertaining a mister-ess as well, Virginia Vallejo. Virginia seems a shrill, possessive and scheming wo-man, whose undying love for Pablo is succeeded by dubious plans of overtaking the Cartel, incited, no doubt, by the sparks between him and Mrs. Bacchan/ Escobar.

Weaving reality with fiction seems a good tactic to the Executive Board. A Voldemort Franklin (not at all related to He Who Must Not Be Named) is drawn in as well, and the members of the Cartel turn their thoughts to murder, assassinations and coercion. Relations never heard of before, either in fiction, or reality, come bursting to light. Voldemort

Franklin is a General! Virginia is a father! Virginia is not a father! Point of Information in Spanish is Pontu de Informacion! Luis Fernando Duque has turned out to be a traitor. He is to be shot in the middle of the conference. Luis Fernando Duque is to be shot in front of his child (Luis Fernando Duque has a child!) Luis Fernando will be executed. Luis Fernando is being executed. LUIS FERNANDO DUQUE HAS BEEN EXECUTED IN FRONT OF ANOTHER COMMITTEE!

Apparently the three drug- shipments that were discovered by the DEA were the result of someone (Duque, Duque, Duque!) snitching. Luis Fernando Duque's appeal was overlooked, and as his last words were a mere confession of his betrayal, the members of the Cartel dragged him out by the collar. Ever the peacemaker, Mrs. Escobar, however, prevented them, and had a quiet word with Duque himself out in the hall. Yet upon the establishment of his betrayal, it was unanimously decided that Duque would be executed publicly. So, with the crowd screaming "Someone, someone, someone!" which was actually, "Duque, Duque, Duque!", he was shot in the heart. The Medellin Cartel grows into a daily soap each growing minute. Generals have come back from oblivion; scandal upon scandal heaps upon the Cartel. Any minute, it seems a skeleton will come to life, announce that Virginia is his mother, and that the wo-man sitting in the committee is an Imposter!

WAYS TO (MUN) DAY BLUES DRIVE AWAY

- 1] RESEARCH
Research well, and prepare well so that you don't mess up your speech, because that doesn't leave a very good first impression now does it?
- 2] TRUSTED RESOURCES
Be clear with your facts. Use trusted resources and websites. Wikipedia does not always count.
If you have already used it, then abort the mission, we repeat, ABORT THE MISSION!
- 3] UNAUSA ROPS
Go through the rules of procedure properly so that you can grasp things easily at the conference, and please don't use the right to parliaments inquiry to use the washroom.
- 4] CONFIDENCE IS KEY
Don't get intimidated by the experienced delegates or the EB. Don't underestimate them either. Always be confident in your approach.
I'm sure you've heard about Trump.
- 5] COMPROMISES REQUIRED
Do not violate your country's foreign policies without giving a presidential statement first. Compromise if necessary!
- 6] DIPLOMACY IS A MUST
Always be diplomatic in your approach. Diplomacy is something each chair looks for in a committee. No, it does not apply to you, delegate of North Korea.
- 7] BE STRATEGIC
Always have a secret strategy. Start lobbying from the very beginning. Keep a special eye out for the delegate of China, those buggers are smart.
- 8] LISTEN TO THEM SPEAK
Don't interrupt delegates during their speeches with your points. Always wait till they finish. Send chits via EB if not recognised. We hope you know what this means :)
- 9] HUSH AND SHUSH
Be a good listener and observer. Take note of things delegates say or do. Especially, for the delegate of USA.
- 10] NO ABSOLUTES REQUIRED
Don't use absolutes like "always" and "never". Try to build a big, great wall between yourself and those words.
- 11] BELIEVE; NEVER DECEIVE
Always believe in what you're defending. If you don't believe in it yourself, how will you make others believe it?
- 12] STAY CALM
Never lose your cool no matter how agitated or pressurised you feel. Don't get intimidated by a delegate's size either. Hitler was 5'1 after all.

IPLIBRARY

-MUN related reads for the delegates' depository-

Behind the fancy formals and farrago-esque fine words, MUNs are a great place to hone your soft skills. The skill set of the mind before you attend a MUN requires a slightly different approach, though, one that can be gained through experience, but more quickly, through reading. So here's a list of 5 books that give you five essential skills that will make you a better MUNer, a better negotiator, and an all round incredible human being. Prepared to be dazzled. Or perhaps, just nudged.

CREATIVE INSIGHT:

Freakonomics by Steven Levitt and Stephen J. Dubner
Drawing connections between crime rates and abortions, drug dealers and finance, and other things you wouldn't expect to be related Freakonomics is the kind of book that opens your mind in directions you wouldn't expect existed. Unlike most investigative non fiction, it makes for a highly informative read without becoming boring, and frankly, if you research even a little bit like the writers did- you should know you're on the right track.

ASSERTIVENESS:

Influence : The psychology of persuasion
by Robert Cialdini

One of the most essential reads on behavioral science, this is an essential for anyone who wants to become better at lobbying. From knowing how to conduct negotiations, to being able to spot when these tricks are being used on you, Influence is going to change not just your future as a MUNer, but also your life. (And improve your ability to get sponsors for your own MUN, because we understand the struggle.)

PERCEPTION:

Transactional Analysis by Eric Berne

Yet another behavioral psychology read, this book contains a widely challenged but also widely supported set of ideas about how we interact with each other and the roles played by individuals in each interaction. Transactional Analysis teaches you a lesson that Sun Tzu marks as imperative in The Art Of War: "Know your enemy, and know yourself." It enables you to identify your strengths in each interaction, thereby giving you greater control over your situations. If it wasn't for the copyright, it'd probably be called "How to win friends and influence people", and done a better job than the actual book, but maybe that's just too much of a savage Berne.

-GUEST WRITER-

One of the Founding Heads of LMGMUN's International Press, Swati Singh- the writer is the founder of the LMGC Book Club, core member of The Lucknow Book Club, and a blogger of lame things.

EMPATHY:

Exit West by Mohsin Hamid

Humanitarian committees and agendas are the staple of nearly every GA. But there's often a GAping hole in the speeches of the committee members and the issues of the people being discussed. That's why this novel is so relevant. A book about refugees, migrants, and the troublesome waters of world politics- interspersed with the stories of separation from people who become strangers to their homes and to each other, Exit West makes you feel what is in the news. Unlike the clinical precision and detachment of a news story, Exit West is about human beings and humanity. So if you're either a newbie or a power delegate, or even if you're in the EB reigning supreme over all events, read this. Please. It'll change you.

KNOWLEDGE:

The Readers' Digest book of Strange Stories, Amazing Facts

As surprising as it may sound, not every MUNer is a storehouse of knowledge. In fact, most aren't. For those of you who only know as much as you ought to from the background guide, this book is going to be your background guide to the world. You're welcome. This book will inform you about so many things in such a simple manner, that it's a shame to not have read it. Not just for MUNers, this book needs to be on the reading list of every literate human being. With sections that explain the natural world, scientific phenomena and world-changing events alongside stories of disasters, frauds and unexplained mysteries; this is a book that will enrich your life and make you, hopefully, a far more informed individual than before.

JOINT CRISIS COMMITTEE

WHEN YOU PAY ATTENTION TO BOREDOM, IT GETS UNBELIEVABLY INTERESTING!

The first committee session of the Central Intelligence Agency discussing the Gulf War started out at a slow pace, as the delegates did not seem to be very enthusiastic to put forth their views and arguments. When the chairperson received a drab response from the delegation, he made it mandatory for the delegates to put forward their statements, thus a round robin ensued. This would surely give you an idea as to how boring the committee was for the EB members and the delegates (not to mention the IP and the Logistics.) One of the delegates even confessed that they were considering not attending the committee the following day because of the lethargic and lifeless atmosphere. It made the IP really ponder their purpose in the committee. Every passing minute seemed like watching repeated reruns of one of Ekta Kapoor's T.V serials.

After fuelling themselves on coffee and sandwiches during the morning tea, the delegates got down to real business in the second session of the committee. The Deputy Director of NSA, the chief analyst as well as the Station Chief of Iraq, the Station Chief of Moscow were among the few people who were and fervently participating in the discussions in the committee. After receiving the update about the fifteen missing people involved in a Black Operation, the debate picked up pace, and the updates that poured in after, injected some life into the committee. Hence, the IP managed to stay alive until the lunch break.

THE LATE BLOOMER

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

KOMITET GOSUDARSTVENNOY BEZOPASNOSTI

ONCE UPON A TIME IN DECEMBER 1989

It's only Day One, but everybody already seems done.

KGB, though not a committee bound by many procedural lines, is definitely one of the most technical cabinets. The freeze date of the committee is December of 1989, and KGB now has full control over USSR.

The day has just begun and the delegates have already been given updates which have thrown them all into a bush of deep thinking and sustainable action. The committee was informed that the USSR had come completely, under the influence of KGB, with the liberal Gorbachev having been replaced by a body double, an active loyal member of the KGB at that, had pledged his allegiance to the organisation at 18. The disintegration of the Soviet Union has been successfully dismissed as a mere rumour.

Honestly, at this point of time, the IP was bored to death. Don't get us wrong, it's not that the debate was uninteresting, it's just that the debate simply refused to begin.

However, no one, and we repeat NO ONE was as bored and uninterested in the goings-on of the committee, as the Vice Chairperson, who simply refused to provide any input (up until the writing of the article, at least); to a conference he may or may not have deemed as unworthy. Or maybe it was delegates who seemed a bit too ditzy. Regardless, he refused to look up from the sheet of paper he was aggressively writing 'something' on. And no, we're 'definitely' not suggesting that he was doodling. Anyhow, the IP predicts that he will have gotten into an altercation with one of the delegates over the procedure he so sorely values by the end of LMGUN.

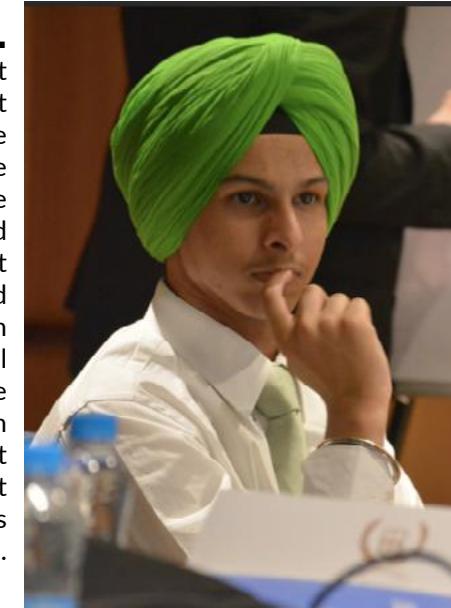

After opening speeches made by the First Directorate and the Seventh, a Directive was introduced by the former. Phew, activity at last! However, it seems that the committee was cursed, because the Directive itself failed (talk about bad karma, huh?). The Executive Board then intervened by impressing upon the importance of 'actually doing something' because of the simple fact that we're not a GA where we're allowed to take three whole days to pass a resolution; (UNEA members, you may pick up your dropped jaws now..) but yet, the directive continued to be a failure. With this, the IP awaits for something more to write about other than expecting some action in committee. Ah hope!

TWO SIDES OF THE COIN

THE REAL

In actuality, the Lieutenant Colonel of KGB Forces, gravely sat and contemplated the Directive under discussion. The Directive under fire was proposed by the First Directorate, and stated that Mikhail Gorbachev must kickstart peaceful dialogue and negotiations with Saddam Hussein owing to intel by his special agents which suggested that he intended to start the annexation of Kuwait, and was soon to be put to vote. Therefore, he quietly sat and carefully ruminated upon his position regarding the same.

THE NOT SO REAL

Silence fell in the room, people were gently nudged to a hush, as the delegates were informed that the British and the Indians were fast approaching a war. Ever figured out the look of a sudden upsurge of patriotism? This look is the answer. A war that would possibly decide the future of the subcontinent itself and maybe the delegate's imagination too. At such a trying moment, the delegate in question sat back to ponder upon the attacks on India and its unity, and that the colour of his tie is no more just the colour of Ben Ten's watch. It is in fact soon going to be labelled as an entire community. In the midst of these thoughts, the delegate's web of imagination is disturbed by the EB's voice and he has to now say a goodbye, perhaps a dramatic one, to 'zone-out' land.

Dear Diary,

You cannot fathom how relieved I am to pour out my feelings without beginning it with the same overused and grilled words. In my intense silence, I somehow manage to scream with my whole body. "DELEGATES!", I shriek, as my fingers curl around the wooden handle of the gavel. I like the stagnant expression with which you listen to my happy, anxiety-driven, mind-numbingly dumb flashes of insight. I like that kind of understanding, which the delegates in my committee clearly lack. I am never my true self because every eye in the room is on an outlook for me to utter something which bars me from fitting perfectly into a stereotypical category. Forget about the Delegate of U.S.A., even the Delegate of North Korea has an opinion to give. Can you imagine that?!

There are delegates who give opinions that can turn the atmosphere of the committee upside down, and then there are insights given by some when I wish the committee were to turn upside down. The gavel in my hand sometimes demands to be struck against someone's head rather than the innocent table. Such is the atrocity I go through. MUNs also make me question my dressing sense at times. A look by a well-dressed delegate is enough to throw me into a bush of self analysis. I often find myself wanting to laugh at the Delegates' faces and acquaint them with their foolishness. I want to look at a co-EB member and pass questioning looks. I want to raise unnecessary point of orders and not care about the absentmindedness I just portrayed. BUT then comes the role of my oh-so dormant conscience which makes introduces me to term called 'responsibility'. Responsibility of the Delegates, the Logistics and the Committee to pass a resolution.

Now, even though I don't look very fond of this position and this power in my hand, these are the same things that have given me the words which I am penning down today. Writing another page of this diary. Turning another chapter of my life.

Hence, I revert back to the same old proceedings of a committee. But I promise, I will be back soon, because these days never fail to increase my want of finding someone to vent to. Until then, I promise not to shed a tear and keep my gavel limited to the table.

There are delegates who give opinions that can turn the atmosphere of the committee upside down, and then there are insights given by some when I wish the committee were to turn upside down.

-The woes of our EB members

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL POLICE ORGANIZATION

SIMPLICITY RESTRAINED

TYPES OF DELEGATES (INTERPOL EDITION)

THE ENTHUSIASTIC ONES-

THE FIRST TIMERS-

THE VETERANS-

THE SOCIAL MEDIA ADDICTS-

THE SULKY SLOTHS-

THE DAINTY DAMSELS-

The lunch break in INTERPOL was extended by almost an hour and the delegates could not have been happier. They returned looking refreshed and energetic after it. The debate was resumed but it was directionless and thus the Chairperson suggested that the delegates should take an unmoderated caucus or as it is called in INTERPOL, an informal session. The delegates were seen crowding around the tables and discussing how they should take the committee forward. Voices were raised as enthusiastic delegates argued and debated. In the far corner of the committee room, the first timers sat intimidated by the veterans. Pretending to be busy they hoped no one would approach them.

The social media addicts were using internet in committee, illegally of course; Snapchat and Instagram stories were updated within moments. Some of the sulky sloths settled for a short siesta. Others Facetimed with their outstation pals, whom they missed ever so much. The dainty damsels recognised an outstanding opportunity to go to the powder room, touch up their makeup and settle their not-so-golden locks.

No sooner did the unmoderated caucus' time lapse than the delegates were all seated and ready to speak their heart out.

UNITED NATIONS ENVIRONMENT ASSEMBLY

DE ILLUMINATI

...committee report from the perspective of some hopeful lights!

We are shining bright but we do not see the lights being reflected on the faces of the delegates. Clamped high on the ceiling, we have absolutely nothing to do. Unlike a few delegates, we can't click pictures, Snapchat with our friends, or seek their advice on matters of grave importance. Our only source of entertainment are the heated arguments among delegates when they seem to almost thrash each other. However, no such thing has happened yet.

The delegates are discussing about 'Fostering Developing Countries' Capacities for Climate Change.' We haven't been fortunate enough to witness a peppery debate between the developed and the developing nations. It is rather shocking for us to see U.S.A. sitting completely isolated, unlike other times when it acts as the 'Boss' of the committee. This seclusion can be attributed to the fact that U.S.A. has just pulled out of the Paris Climate Agreement and has lost the support of many countries including its allies. On the other hand, France has been generous enough to offer electricity produced by using recycled nuclear fuel at subsidised rates to the developing nations and the delegate of UK opposed to the fact that "Humans believe that they are above God and can afford to go against the environment." The delegate of China is extremely eager to rule the committee and it seems that the delegate of South Africa is struggling with the great number of chits he has received.

However, we do not want everything to be all sugar and sweet. Instead, we hanker after sarcasm, wit and fights. We are the 'light' of hope for the delegates and we expect 'brighter' discussions from them in return.

HELLO FROM THE OTHER SIDE

THE REAL

The delegate of China in UNEA was deeply engrossed in thoughts on how to conspire against the delegate of the United States Of America, who recently pulled out of the Paris Climate Agreement. China was worried about USA stating that it has a Plan B, while the other countries don't.

THE NOT SO REAL

While serious discussions are going on in the committee about droughts and deaths due to pollution, the delegate of China had deep thoughts about the walnut brownies that would be served during the lunch. He conspired and masterminded a superb plan that mapped in his mind the quickest possible route to grab his big plate of brownies. As he pictured himself seated in the corner like little jack horner, his face lit up with joy!

SOCIAL, CULTURAL AND HUMANITARIAN COMMITTEE

THANK YOU FOR RECOGNIZING ME CHAIR!

TOTALLY FICTITIOUS, COMPLETELY BELIEVABLE

And after failing about 8 moderated caucus topics, the delegates decided to have an UnMod session to decide upon topics they want to speak on. That clearly worked as they finally passed a motion and the committee came to life again. The IP hopes, for their own sake, that the delegates continue to make use of their words during moderated caucuses and not just during Unmoderated caucuses and not say "thank you for recognizing me chair" every time they're recognized. Ah hope!!
